

Mix It Up Day

Wednesday, October 14, 2009

2-4 PM

Dunn Conference Suite

In the spring of 2009, staff from Facilities and Housing participated in a four-session weekly book club. The discussion was guided by the book, “Why Are All the Black Kids Sitting Together in the Cafeteria?” by author Dr. Beverly Daniel Tatum. At the conclusion of the book club, the staff was inspired to hold an activity to engage others in a cross-cultural conversation. The first spring “Mix It Up” Day took place on May 6, 2009 in the Dunn Conference Suite. Modeled after the Southern Poverty Law Center - Teaching Tolerance, “Mix It Up” seeks to break down the barriers between individuals and improve intergroup relations so that there are fewer misunderstandings which can potentially lead to conflicts and harassment.

This year, the Office Institutional Diversity invites you to participate in our first fall “Mix It Up” Day on Wednesday, October 14, 2009 in the Dunn Conference Suite, Crimson Hall. Refreshments are provided. You won’t want to miss it! It is a great way to learn something new about your colleagues and have cross-cultural conversations in a fun and relaxed environment. At the event, we will announce our fall book club theme and dates.

If you are interested in attending the Mix It Up day event on Oct. 14th from 2-4 PM contact Donna Wood with your RSVP by Friday, October 9, 2009.
